Homework - MeetUp

I attended the Women Who Code MeetUp, "Hack Night Women Who Code San Francisco, April 21, 2021." We learned how to use Blocks to code a game. The game was that the duck would chase the ice cream (originally a pizza slice). I first saw Blocks during a Harvard data science lecture, but I didn't get a chance to use it. So, it was nice to have the opportunity if desired to code with it. One person did the coding and one person did the explanation and I was the audience, along with some other people.

We first introduced ourselves and there was an icebreaker as well. The icebreaker was "if you could have one superpower, what would it be?" My superpower would be to be able to absorb knowledge instantly--a superbrain. This was a nice group. I hope to attend other events by WWCode San Francisco.
